The Catechism of the Crisis in the Church Fr Matthias Gaudron

(I) THE CRISIS IN THE CHURCH continued...

5) How Does the Current Crisis Differ From Church Crises In The Past?

The current crisis in the Church is distinct from those of the past above all in the fact that it is the highest authorities in the Church themselves who have unleashed this crisis, who maintain it, and who prevent the implementation of effective measures for its resolution.

Have there not been very grave crises in the Church in the past?

There have always been crises in the Church. Priests, bishops, and even popes have not always lived their lives in accordance with the Gospel. Immorality and indiscipline among the clergy have often led to decline in the Church. From time to time priests and bishops have departed from the true Faith. But never, as in our times, have errors and the public negation of truths of the Faith have been spread abroad thanks to the tolerance, approbation, and even the active efforts of the Roman authorities and the episcopate throughout the world. This is the peculiar characteristic of the current crisis: the fact that it is favoured by the highest authorities in the Church, including the pope.

Has this singular character of the current crisis been recognized by the authorities in the Church? Pope Paul VI himself in 1968 made his famous declaration that the Church finds herself in a state of “self-destruction”: “The Church today finds herself in a state of disquiet, self-criticism, one might even say of self-destruction. It is like an interior upheaval, acute and complex, which no one expected after the Council....as though the Church were striking herself.”
