Fifteenth Sunday after Pentecost

The Catechism of the Crisis in the Church by Fr. Matthias Gaudron

III The Church's Magisterium

22) Why do these popes pass for conservatives? (continued)

- Can examples be cited in which John Paul II supported modernists?

John Paul II named cardinal four neo-modernist leaders: the French theologians Henri de Lubac and Yves Congar, and the German-language theologians Hans Urs von Balthasar and Walter Kaspar.

- Who is Henri de Lubac?

Henri de Lubac (Jesuit, 1896-1991) was the principal leader in France of what is called the "new theology." After World War II, the "new theology" adopted the modernist theses condemned by St. Pius X in 1907 (confounding of the natural and the supernatural, doctrinal evolutionism, etc.), but more cleverly. The Jesuit Teilhard de Chardin (1881-1955) said of St. Augustine: "Don't mention that unfortunate man; he spoiled everything by introducing the supernatural."] His confrere and friend Henri de Lubac, who always defended him (not hesitating to abridge his correspondence while claiming to publish it in its entirety), was much more subtle: he admitted in principle the distinction between "natural" and "supernatural," but then in his books deliberately worked to make it lose all meaning. Without denying anything too categorically, the "new theology" excels at making everything hazy by systematically putting forward the least precise authors. It invokes the Fathers of the Church against St. Thomas, the Greek Fathers against the Latin Fathers, and even, when useful, St. Thomas himself against his most exact commentators.

Pius XII condemned the principal theses of the "new theology" in the Encyclical Humani Generis in 1950, but the Encyclical was hardly obeyed. Henri de Lubac, who had been suspended from teaching by his Roman superiors, was a theologian at Vatican Council II and named cardinal by John Paul II in February 1983.

- Who is Yves Congar?

Yves Congar (Dominican, 1904-95) was the father of the "new ecclesiology," that is, the new way of conceiving the Church. A disciple of Fr. Marie-Dominique Chenu, he took classes at the Protestant Faculty of Strasbourg just after being ordained to the priesthood. He decided to consecrate his whole life to the rapprochement of the Church with the heretics and schismatics, going so far as to claim:

Luther is one of the greatest religious geniuses of all history. In this regard I put him on the same level as St. Augustine, St. Thomas Aquinas, or Pascal. In a certain way, he is even greater. He entirely rethought Christianity....I studied Luther a lot. Scarcely a month goes by without my revisiting his writings.[54]

Subject to strict surveillance after 1947, (he would later say: "From the beginning of 1947 until the end of 1956, I experienced nothing but an uninterrupted series of denunciations, warnings, restrictive or discriminatory measures, and mistrustful interventions") he cleaved to the same ideas (in his intimate diary, he relates that twice while at Rome he went to urinate against the door of the Holy Office as a sign of revolt!). Nevertheless, Yves Congar was summoned as an expert to Vatican II by John XXIII and greatly influenced the Council. John Paul II named him cardinal in October 1994.
