Eighteenth Sunday after Pentecost

The Catechism of the Crisis in the Church by Fr. Matthias Gaudron

III The Church's Magisterium

24) In the Church's history, are there analogous examples of papal deficiencies?

If there have been, unfortunately, a certain number of popes whose moral lives were not exemplary, yet in doctrinal matters, they were almost always irreproachable. There are, however, some examples of popes who fell into error or who, at least, upheld error instead of fighting it. These were the Popes Liberius, Honorius I, and John XXII.

- How did Pope Liberius uphold error?

Pope Liberius (352-66) succumbed to the pressure of the Arians, who denied the divinity of Christ. In 357, he excommunicated Bishop Athanasius, the valiant defender of Catholic doctrine, and subscribed to an ambiguous profession of faith.

- How did Pope Honorius I uphold error?

In the seventh century, Sergius, the Patriarch of Constantinople, invented the heresy of monothelism. This error teaches that in Christ there is only one will, while in fact Christ possesses two wills, the divine will and a human will. Sergius succeeded in deceiving Honorius I (625-38) and winning him to his cause.

- Did Pope Honorius really adhere to the error of monothelism?

It seems that Honorius did not really share the Patriarch of Constantinople's error, but, not understanding thoroughly the whole matter and seeing in it nothing but a theologians' quarrel, he still took Sergius's side and silenced St. Sophronius, who defended the Catholic cause. For this reason, Honorius was posthumously condemned by Pope Leo II.

- How did Pope John XXII uphold error?

John XXII (1316-34) supported the false doctrine according to which the souls of the faithful departed do not obtain the beatific vision and thus full beatitude until after the general judgment. Beforehand, they simply enjoy the vision of Christ's humanity. Similarly, the demons and damned men do not undergo the eternal pains of hell until after the last judgment. However, he had the humility to allow himself to be corrected and retracted his error on December 3, 1334, the day before he died.

- What lesson can be learned from these three examples?

From these examples, and especially from that of St. Athanasius, we see that it can happen that a lone bishop may be in the right in his principled stand against the pope.
