Chapter 5: The Creation of the World

Man (Continued)

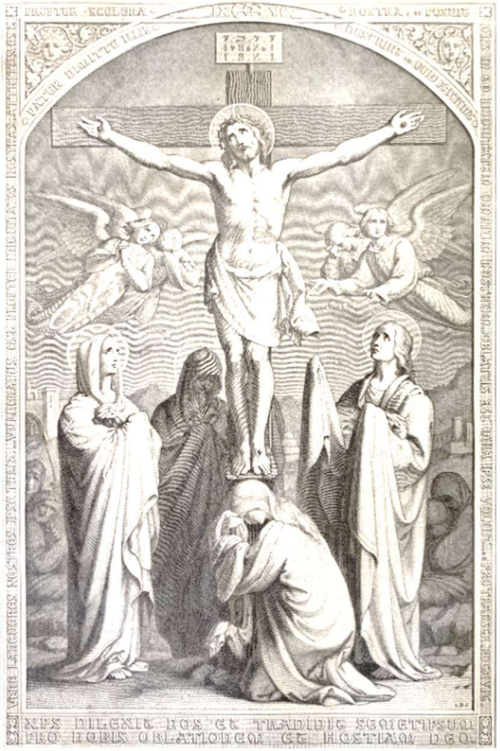

The young seminarian entering the seminary should strive to penetrate with all his soul this life of prayer, which unreservedly hands him over to Our Lord and to the Holy Trinity, placing his mind in subjection to Revelation, which enlightens for us the Mysterium Christi, by the virtue of faith and obedience: "Redigere omnem intellectum in obsequium Christi—bringing into captivity every understanding unto the obedience of Christ" (II Cor. 10:5); placing his will and his entire soul under the impetus of the charity of the Holy Ghost in imitation of Jesus Christ, in obedience to the law of charity expressed by the Ten Commandments and especially by the First Commandment as well as by Our Lord's Sermon on the Mount (Mt. 5 through 7). Thus, his entire soul will be animated with the virtue of religion, and with virtue both natural and supernatural, in union with the Sacrifice of Our Lord renewed and continued on the altar. Thus will he be best fitted to ascend the degrees of holiness, the goal desired by God the Creator and Redeemer, expressed in the first three petitions of the Our Father.

Chapter 6: Jesus Christ by Whom Man's Return to God Is Accomplished

The mystery of Jesus Christ is so profound, so extraordinary, that it would seem more natural to adore Him in silence than to speak of Him. For we must rightly fear that our words, like our thoughts, are vastly inadequate to express all of the riches contained in the ineffable sanctuary which is Jesus Christ. St. Paul certainly thinks so: "Orantes simul et pro nobis ut Deus aperiat nobis ostium sermonis ad loquendum mysterium Christi...ut manifestem illud ita ut oportet me loqui.—Praying withal for us also, that God may open unto us a door of speech to speak the Mystery of Christ...that I may make it manifest as I ought to speak" (Col. 4:3, 4).
