GOD HATH REGARDED THE HUMILITY OF HIS HANDMAID

In this verse of the MAGNIFICAT, the Blessed Virgin declares the sovereign benefits, which are the principal causes and motives which she has to magnify God, to rejoice in Him, and to show herself so thankful to Him.

“Because God regarded the humility and lowliness of His handmaid”, by these words the Virgin points at two roots of the divine benefits. The principal one on the part of God, and the other on our own.

It is on the part of Almighty God that He deigns to regard us with a gracious eye, and to be mindful of us, to do us good. For although it is true that He sees all things, yet He is not said to regard nor make account of those which He leaves in the abyss of nothing, or in the depth of their misery, but of those which He regards, to use His great mercy towards them.

The root on our part is, the acknowledgment of our lowliness, by which we may dispose ourselves to receive the gifts of His divine liberality. And so the Blessed Virgin as illuminated by God, joined both these together, magnifying God, because He deigned to regard the humility of His handmaid. By which words she does not so much confess that she has the virtue of humility, as exercise it; for as one truly humble, she either esteems not herself, or she would have concealed it; but with humility she confesses that she is lowly, base, and contemptible as a slave, or a handmaid, and that, notwithstanding all this, Almighty God disdained not to regard her, by which she teaches us that the foundation of the praises of God, and of thanksgiving for the benefits He does us, is the acknowledgement of our own baseness and unworthiness, for in this manner there will be no danger of vain self-complacency, as it happened to the proud Pharisee. Rather this lowliness is to be the motive why I should beseech Almighty God to regard me with a merciful eye, and to do me great favours, for He is wont as David says, “to look down on the low things in heaven and in earth,” and to do them great mercies. And this David had experience of, saying to himself “For Thou hast regarded my humility Thou hast saved my soul out of distresses.”
