SECOND COLLECTIONS: Today, second Sunday after Easter is Good Shepherd Sunday, with special prayers for vocations. The second collections will be for vocations.

Christ our Lord being risen again, has retained in His glorious body, the signs of the wounds of His feet, hands, and side, for several reasons :

To confirm His disciples in the faith of His Resurrection, showing them, not only His body that they might feel it, but the very holes also, which the nails and lance had made, that so they might believe that it was the selfsame body which was fastened to the cross, and not another made anew. By this fact He confirms us also in the faith of our own resurrection, which will be with the selfsame bodies that we had in this mortal life.

That the same wounds might serve for signs and trophies of His victorious triumph; as also for arguments, to show how much He esteemed pains and contumelies, honouring His wounds so far as to retain and place them in His glorified body, with a singular beauty and splendour. By this He intended to encourage us to suffer, to make very great account, and to hold it for a high honour, to bear the marks of any wounds in our body, that is to say, of any labours like those of Christ our Lord, which we have suffered for His love.

That they might serve as a memorial to put Him in mind of what we have cost Him, and move Him to love us, pardon us, and evermore to do us good. And that He who as God, as the prophet Isaias says, is not forgetful of us, because He keeps us written in His hands, may neither be so forgetful of us, as man, since He bears it within His hands, how deeply He bought us.

That He might show these wounds to His Eternal Father, and thus, exercising the office of our perpetual advocate and mediator, might appease the wrath and indignation which He had conceived against us for our sins. For if the sight of the rainbow in the heavens, beautiful with its three colours, so appeases the anger of Almighty God, that for this sign He perpetually remembers not to drown the world again with a deluge of water, how much more will He be appeased upon beholding this rainbow of the empyreal heavens, Christ Jesus our Lord, with those three sorts of wounds, in His hands, feet, and side, and will serve Himself of this bow as of a sign and motive not to chastise the world as its sins deserve?

To provoke us with the sight of these wounds, to love and obey Him, acknowledging by them how much He has loved us, and how much He has suffered for our sake; so that spiritual sight of these wounds, which remain at this present in the glorified body of Christ our Lord, is most effectual to awake in us the desire of employing all our powers in the service of our Lord.

To confound the damned in the day of judgment, by showing them the wounds which He received from them, as witnesses of the great desire He had to save them, if they had not by their own default, put an impediment in the way. On the other hand, with the self-same wounds, Christ our Lord will make joyful His just, not only on that day, but for all eternity, for they shall clearly see in them so many motives to love Him, who received and suffered them for their sakes.
